The final countdown

A Gainsborough pupil takes a leap – perhaps towards a new personal best

HACKNEY has begun counting down the last 500 days until the start of the London 2012 Games. As applications opened for tickets, pupils from Gainsborough primary school, formed a giant 500 in their playground – which overlooks the Olympic Park site – to mark the historic occasion. The children were taking a break from training for the Council-run Personal Bests programme. The scheme is up and running in most of the borough's primary schools, and aims to inspire pupils to enjoy sport, and improve on their personal best in a range of Olympic and Paralympic sports. It has proved so successful in encouraging young people to take part in sport that the scheme is now being adopted in other parts of the country. For more on 500 days to go see pg 4; for Personal Bests turn to pg 7

SCREEN COME TRUE

By
Gareth Greene

A NEW state-of-the-art cinema is set to open in Hackney this autumn, offering film, music and cultural and community events.

The Council-owned Ocean building on Mare Street is due to be redeveloped as the 'Hackney Picturehouse' by leading industry operator City Screen.

The four-screen venue will boast luxury seating, a street level café and 3D technology. It will show an assortment of Hollywood blockbusters, art house, documentary, independent and international films.

The Hackney Picturehouse will also screen live broadcasts of music, theatre and opera, including performances from National Theatre Live, as well as Q&A sessions with filmmakers and art exhibitions.

City Screen have said that Ocean's existing music venue facilities will be utilised including an upstairs bar that will stage live music nights.

The group also runs successful Picturehouse cinemas in Brixton; Clapham; Greenwich; Notting Hill; Stratford; and across the country.

Speaking after the contract for the lease of the building was signed on 4 March, Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "I'm really pleased the local community and visitors will soon have a new state-of-the-art cinema in the heart of the borough. This is a really positive boost for the area and will be welcomed when it opens for business later this year.

"We have lots of young families in Hackney who will, I'm sure, be only too pleased to have a cinema close to home and the prospect of foreign language and art house films, as well as blockbuster movies, will be of great appeal to our diverse and creative population. The venue will also play host to a range of community activities including kids' clubs and art exhibitions, and we hope it will become an important hub for the whole community."

Lyn Goleby, Managing Director of City Screen/Picturehouse Cinemas, added: "Our aim is to make the Hackney Picturehouse a really vibrant community cinema that will become one of the linchpins of cultural activity in the borough, and offer a rich mix of mainstream and specialised film, music and other locally centred activity."

£293k for heritage project

HACKNEY Museum has received a £293,000 grant to record the changes taking place in the borough for future generations.

'Mapping The Change' is a history project about residents and the impact of the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games on their lives.

Since 2007 it has been capturing the voices of Hackney's diverse population, working with community groups, artists and individuals to produce photographic, digital media, text, and audio records of the changes – and people's responses to them.

It is one of Hackney's major contributions to the Cultural Olympiad,

celebrating arts and culture alongside sports in the run up to the 2012 Games. The funding, from Heritage Lottery Fund, will allow the project to continue right up to the start of the Games.

Hackney is leading on the majority of activities, with Waltham Forest and Newham councils also involved.

The grant will be used to run programmes and conduct outreach work with schools and community organisations.

Ongoing activities include oral history recordings in Hackney, photo competitions, community journalism courses, art and heritage workshops at Homerton hospital, film documentaries, history walks and talks, and an extensive schools and families programmes.

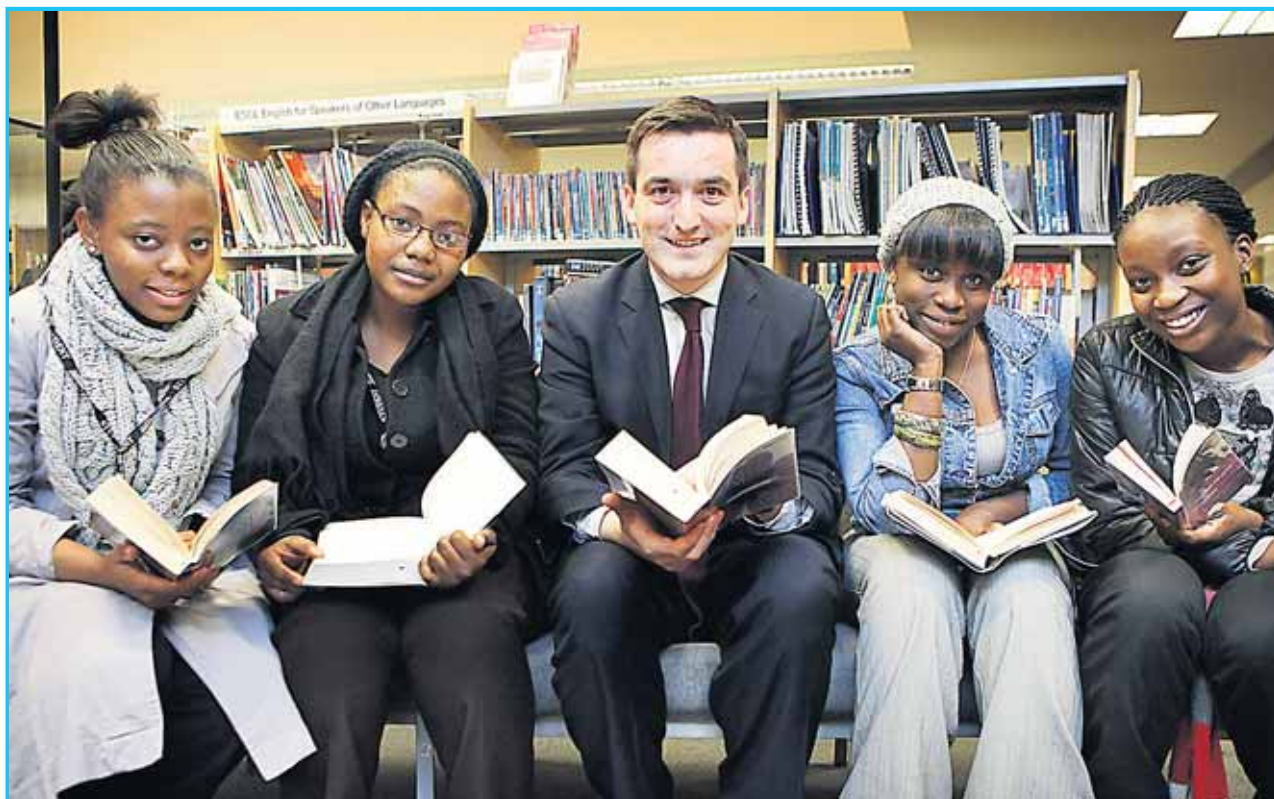

A series of exhibitions will culminate in 2012 with a major display at Hackney Museum in Reading Lane.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Hackney co-hosting the London 2012 Games is not only about new buildings, better transport and job opportunities, it is about people experiencing change in preparation for what will be a major event in history. It is important that the Council plays a role in documenting this."

THE results of Hackney's inaugural 'BOscars' are in – and the winner is 'Horrid Henry'.

Coinciding with World Book Day on 3 March, the Council held its first ever 'Oscars for books' survey to find out some of the tomes, volumes, pop-ups and novels making a big impression on residents.

'Horrid Henry's Joke Book' was named as Hackney children's most treasured book, while 'The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo' came top for adults. Also announced were the most borrowed

Rachael and Mert, both nine, with some Horrid Henry books fiction and non-fiction books for children and adults across the borough's eight libraries last year: 'The Girl Who Kicked A Hornet's Nest'; 'Life In The UK – A Journey To Citizenship'; 'Clothes Poems'; and 'Horrid

Henry's Joke Book'.

Contributing speaker Claire Norman, a Cambridge University scholar, discussed the importance of libraries and spoke about her favourite books found within them.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "We brought the BOscars to Hackney because we want to get people thinking and talking about books. Books are free to borrow which is why everyone should pay a visit to their local library. While you're there take a look at everything else your library has to offer – free internet access, study space and information about your local area and services."

In the last year, for the first time ever, there were more than 1.5million visits to Hackney's libraries.

The Council recently announced that none of the borough's eight libraries would be closing, and that for 2011/12 around £8.1million has been earmarked for library and archive services. Later this year, the new Dalston CLR James Library and Hackney Archives will be opening its doors.

Message from the Mayor

Countdown to 2012

THERE are now less than 500 days to go until the opening ceremony of the London 2012 Olympics and tickets have gone on sale. With prices starting at £20, Games organisers hope that attending events will be affordable for many residents.

Interest is likely to be strong, however, and ticket allocation will also be a lottery, so it may mean that some sports fans miss out. Most unfairly, in my opinion, that could include some of Hackney's young athletes – the stars of future Olympic Games. That's why the Council has agreed to buy 100 tickets – all of which will be given to young people in our borough who achieve excellence in sport in the coming year.

While excitement builds around the Games and the sporting action that will take place next summer, the Council continues to work hard to ensure that a valuable legacy for Hackney is achieved after 2012. We are working with our Olympic partners to ensure that a whole new neighbourhood in our section of the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park is created that will integrate closely with the communities currently living and working in Hackney Wick. The neighbourhood will include high quality parkland, homes and community facilities.

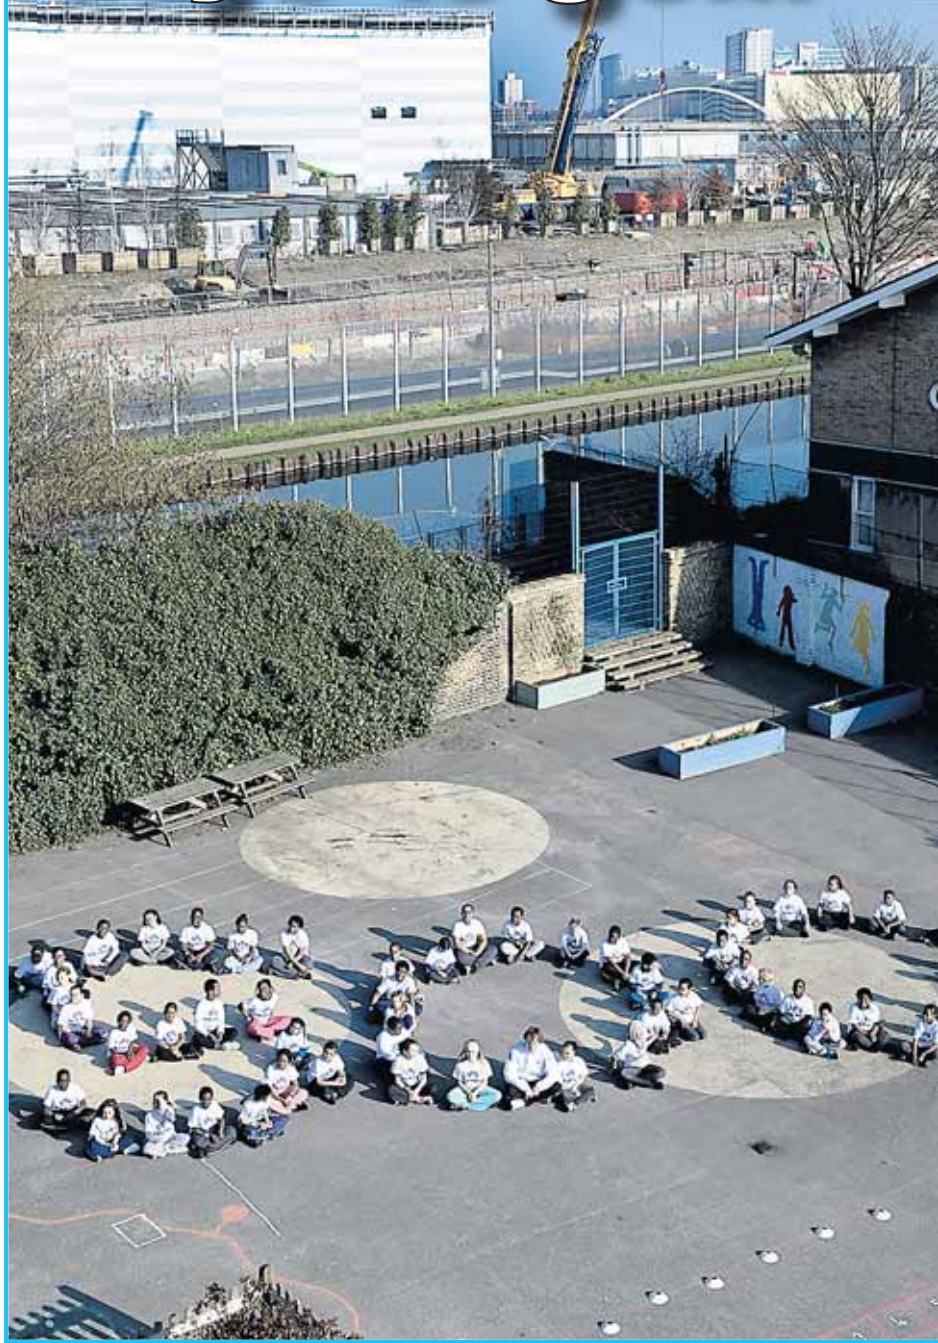

Sitting at the heart of the neighbourhood will be the press and broadcast centres that will house 20,000 journalists during the Games. These centres will remain once the media leave and are designated as an employment area, with the potential to create thousands of new jobs locally. The centres will have state of the art communications technology and excellent transport connections.

The Council's aim is that they are transformed into a digital, media and creative hub supporting creative industries of all sizes, linking closely with the creative community already thriving in Hackney Wick. This is East London's most significant opportunity to create a lasting economic legacy from the Games and we remain committed to achieving this for our residents and local businesses.

£40k prize under the bridge

THE launch of the 2012 host boroughs' fourth summer arts and culture festival saw a Hackney-based project awarded a £40,000 prize. Not-for-profit collective, Assemble (above), was awarded the Bank of America Merrill Lynch CREATE Art Award for their work, 'Folly

“With 500 days to go until the Games comes to town, Hackney is ready to welcome the millions of visitors”

AS tickets went on sale and a giant clock in Trafalgar Square began its countdown, Hackney schoolchildren marked 500 days until the start of the 2012 Olympic Games.

Youngsters from Gainsborough primary, in E9, were joined by Hackney 2012 ambassador and Paralympic swimmer, Dervis Konuralp, as they formed a giant human 500 to celebrate the landmark moment.

Gainsborough was chosen for the photoshoot because it is the closest school to the 2012 site, and overlooks the International Press and Broadcast Centres – which will be part of the post Games legacy for Hackney's section of the Olympic Park.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: “With 500 days to go until the Games come to town, Hackney is ready to welcome the millions of visitors who will enjoy this sporting spectacle.

“But as a Council our priority is to secure the best possible legacy – including jobs for local people, better public transport, a new neighbourhood in the East of the borough, and a better environment.”

At midnight on 15 March, the application period began for 2012 tickets. There are 6.6million tickets on sale, including 2.5million at £20 or less, with further discounts available for people aged 60-plus, or under 16, when the Games begin. London 2012 organisers have also pledged to meet the needs of as many disabled visitors as possible.

Residents who want to go to the Games can view the schedule online and apply for tickets until 26 April. Ballots will be run for oversubscribed events, and applicants will find out if they have been successful by 24 June. Those without internet access can use the 100-plus computers in Hackney's libraries. Alternatively, application packs are available from branches of Lloyds TSB. Tickets for the Paralympic Games go on sale on 9 September.

Apply for up to £3k carnival funding

THE Council is inviting community groups to apply for grants of between £500 and £3,000 to take part in this year's Hackney One Carnival on 7 August. The money can be used to fund work with Hackney's diverse communities to help create the carnival spectacles, produce costumes and staging, and perfect their acts. Applications from groups that can demonstrate eco-friendly sound systems or wish to work together on joint projects are particularly welcome.

The carnival is part of the Cultural Olympiad celebrating arts and culture alongside sports in the run up to the Games.

The deadline for applications is 4pm on 8 April. For more info call: 020 8356 3478; or e-mail: silke.pillinger@hackney.gov.uk

Planning a big event for 2012?

ARE you planning an event in 2012? The Games will see more activities held in that summer than ever before – but this will put huge pressure on the fire, police, transport, ambulance and other public services. Therefore, the Council is collecting information on behalf of the Greater London Authority about events taking place in the borough between 1 May and 31

October 2012. It is crucial that anyone holding an event which involves 499 people or more during this period informs the Council by 31 March 2011. Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Karen Alcock, added: "It's really important to me that people who live on our estates get a chance to share ideas about how to get involved, and find out the real difference that having a stake in the community can make."

Golden opportunities

THE Council is giving 100 Olympic Games tickets to young people in the borough.

The Council confirmed it will purchase its allocation of tickets offered by the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games (LOCOG) to all 33 local authorities in the capital, and will distribute them to a selection of local young people who excel in sport. The tickets will be for a range of sporting events.

A Council spokesperson said: "We have always made it clear that we will do all we can to help our younger residents realise a once in a lifetime opportunity of participating in the Games. The cost of these tickets will be met from money already identified for increasing resident participation and access to the Games and so will not be at the expense of other services.

"Ensuring our residents get the maximum benefit possible from the Games is a priority for the Council and we're very pleased that LOCOG will help us realise the dreams of some of our young people, to see their sporting heroes in action, and give them more inspiration to do even better in the future."

The selection process will be confirmed in the near future.

The ears have it

WHETHER it's listening to Lord Sugar on a local street; an ode to the number 38 bus; or a secret underground river; the borough's colourful history is to be showcased with the launch of a new museum-style audio tour.

Created by the team behind the Hackney Podcast, 'Hackney Hear' is a free smartphone app that plays a mix of location-specific interviews, features, poetry, music and new writing.

Movements recorded by GPS will trigger audio clips allowing users to hear insights into Hackney's myriad communities and hotspots, changing according to the software user's location.

Around 400 unique audio pieces on the borough will be on offer.

Hackney Podcast said it launched the service this month as the London 2012 build up 'becomes feverish' and hopes the service continues to grow after the Games are over.

Hackney Hear is designed for use on iPhone and Android handsets.

Gainsborough Primary School pupils participate in some Olympic sports as part of the 2012 inspired Personal Bests programme and (bottom right and below inset) St John of Jerusalem pupils during their visit to St Bede in Winchester

By Ruth Garland

HACKNEY'S ground-breaking Personal Bests athletics programme has returned for a fourth year – but this time with a new twist.

The ancient county town of Winchester has taken Hackney to its heart and the scheme is attracting interest among district councils throughout Hampshire.

Earlier this year, children from St John of Jerusalem Primary School joined children from St Bede Primary School, Winchester, for a Personal Bests activity day at the Winchester Sports stadium.

On 7 July, a group of young sports leaders from Winchester are set to pay a return visit, travelling to Hackney Marshes to help out with the Personal Bests Finals.

The Council-run programme operates in nearly all of Hackney's primary schools and has an excellent track record for inspiring children, helping them to excel, and encouraging those who have never done competitive sports to take part.

Children, aged nine to 11, receive three athletics training sessions from specialist coaches at their schools and record a baseline performance in six Olympic and Paralympic sports, including javelin, long jump, triple jump, shot putt, discus, and speed bounce, with boccia – a Paralympic sport – offered to pupils in special schools.

Each school then sends the six boys and six girls – who have shown most improvement on their scores – to borough-wide finals.

Last year, three quarters of those who took part had never represented their school before.

A key part of the programme is an inspirational classroom session led by Hackney's Paralympic medallist and 2012 ambassador, Dervis Konuralp.

He welcomed Winchester's involvement, saying: "The great thing about this programme is that anyone can take part. I was invited to Winchester for their sports awards and the numbers are amazing. They're looking at 2,000 children taking part."

Young people showcase talents and learn new skills during the Council's fifth youth arts and culture festival

MORE than 1,000 young people have been involved in this year's Discover Young Hackney – the Council's free arts festival for 13 to 19-year-olds.

The programme featured 29 projects during February, aimed at making arts and culture more accessible to young people across the borough.

Some joined master drummers and traditional storytellers on a journey celebrating African culture, while others learnt new moves and took part in a dance off during street dance and cheer leading workshops. Disability-led theatre company, Graeae, and youth organisation the Huddleston Centre teamed up to create a piece of accessible youth theatre, showcased on 24 February at the Robin Redmond Resource Centre.

“DYH provides young people with the opportunity to showcase their talent to a wider audience”

Holly Watson-Abell, the 13-year-old winner of a talent competition which launched the festival, got to sing to a crowd of around 150 young people at Village Underground on 23 February. It was organised by CREATE Programmers – a group of 10 young people, aged 15 to 23, from each of the 2012 host boroughs – and also saw performances from dubstep artists True Tiger, Maverick Sabre and Encore.

CREATE Programmers' Natalie Hippolyte, 24, from Hackney, said: “The event was a great opportunity for young people from different boroughs to come together and celebrate the local talent within their area. DYH provides young people with the opportunity to showcase their talent to a wider audience, as well as promoting the positivity and the fantastic work coming from young people. “Putting on this event enabled me to learn new skills in marketing and event organising, and without this kind of opportunity I would never have known how to go about it, so it's a great chance for young people to develop their skills."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "DYH has been a great success and something I'm proud to have been involved with. It is important we give young people access to arts and culture and that they have opportunities to get involved and try out new things."

Now in its fifth year, the Council-run festival has proved a successful way of providing positive activities, increased self-confidence and pathways to employment and training opportunities in local cultural industries for young people.

The varied DYH programme offered workshops in photography, theatre, dance, and film through to fashion, design and creative writing.

Arcola Energy Executive Director, Ben Todd, started his career with the theatre as a volunteer handyman

By
Melissa Abache

AT first it seems like an idea that wouldn't work – actors and engineers in a single location, collaborating to generate ideas for a more sustainable city.

Yet, this is exactly what Ben Todd has achieved in the last six years as Executive Director of Arcola Theatre.

He first visited the theatre in Dalston in 2005, when a friend who worked there asked for his help. He fell in love with the vibrant, organic feel of the organisation – and with Hackney generally – and started volunteering as a theatre handyman. It had a very different atmosphere to Cambridge University, where he had spent the previous eight years completing a MEng and PhD in sustainable energy.

Ben began to think about the potential for bringing together engineers and theatre people to promote innovation in sustainability through the arts – and in the process making the Arcola the world's first carbon neutral theatre.

It wasn't difficult to convince Arcola's founding directors, Mehmet Ergen and Leyla Nazli, that improving the theatre's energy performance would mean significant savings in running costs. In turn, they showed Ben how much easier it was to get sustainability messages across through theatre, rather than lectures and frightening statistics.

So in 2007, he started Arcola Energy, an organisation with the specific aim of driving sustainability in the arts, as well as commercially developing low-carbon products. He had grown impatient at the slow pace to reach solutions when working with large engineering and technology firms. But the theatre and the people working there offered an immediacy and flexibility that helped to get things done quickly.

Attracting funding was difficult for a long time, because the Arcola's 'evolutionary down-at-heel ethos' didn't suit high profile investors. But Ben realised they could build a narrative to convince them if he got the ball rolling and started making things happen before any money was even available.

Today, he feels he has achieved his goal of bringing very different people together – from volunteers from Hackney and around the world, to individuals from firms like engineering consultancy, ARUP – who have all contributed to projects to make the theatre more sustainable.

Born in London, raised in Liverpool, and a proud Clapton resident since 2006, Ben considers Hackney to be a place full of 'raw energy'.

He believes the borough

“Most people living in Hackney have chosen to come here to change their lifestyles in a positive way” is receptive to the principles of sustainability because 'most people living in Hackney have chosen to come here to change their lifestyles in a positive way, although sometimes with small resources'.

He adds: "This gives the opportunity to show them how they can live in the coolest place in the UK and build a community around sustainable values and lifestyles."

I get the sense as I talk to Ben, that Arcola Energy is trying to become a world-class organisation. But at the same time, when you walk through the door, you step into a genuine community centre where you are inspired to do more, or do things better.

Ben would like to see the Arcola grow, but without losing its down-to-earth accessibility, and recognises that the future, in a new building and with bigger audiences, won't be easy. And he feels the Arcola shares similar challenges to Dalston and Hackney more generally. How to manage a population with rising incomes, but without the place losing its magic and becoming an 'any-town'? Only time will tell if he succeeds.

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I'VE been sorting through my winter wardrobe and found a lot of clothes that I don't want any more. I was going to throw them away. But my neighbour says I can put everything out for collection in my Green Box. Is this true?

A: Yes, unwanted clothes and other textiles, as well as shoes can be recycled. Textiles should be clean and placed in a plastic bag to keep them dry, while shoes should be tied together in pairs.

Items are sent to social enterprise LM Barry for sorting. Good quality garments are sold on or sent abroad for charity use. Ripped or heavily worn clothes that aren't suitable for reuse, together with old curtains, sheets and other textiles, are turned into wadding or dusters.

For residents without a Green Box, textile recycling bins are located around the borough. Please note: duvets and pillows cannot be recycled via either service.

The Council has been awarded a share in £3.7million to increase food recycling services

By

Mary Anna Wright

HACKNEY will share in a £3.7million fund to help London boroughs boost their recycling services.

The money will be used by the Council to help residents living in flats recycle more by expanding food recycling services to an extra 8,000 properties.

The Council's recycling team is set to meet

“ Recycling food waste is an easy way to cut down the amount of rubbish dumped in landfill ” with Tenant Resident Associations and housing managers to plan how services will be introduced, and it is hoped they will be up and running by autumn. Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: “I am delighted that people living in blocks of flats will now be able to recycle more. Recycling food waste is an easy way to cut down the amount of rubbish dumped in landfill. Expanding this service will really help make Hackney greener.”

The £122,422 award follows a successful bid by the Council to

The London Waste and Recycling Board, which was set up in 2007 to transform the management of waste in the capital.

It is funded by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the London Development Agency.

300 trees for 'ecotherapy'

By Rachel Salmon

A HOUSING charity has planted about 300 trees at a site in Hackney as part of an 'ecotherapy' programme.

And in partnership with Groundwork London, more trees are set to be planted at Clissold Community Garden, in Clissold Road, to engage people in gardening through the Peter Bedford Housing Association's 'Roots and Boots' programme.

The social landlord works alongside people who have faced long-term social exclusion through homelessness, mental health problems, or learning difficulties.

Staff hope the trees, provided by the Woodland Trust, will eventually produce fruit for participants to make into jams, jellies and chutneys.

Community gardener, Michael Turrissi, said: “Growing your own food is a simple, but also very powerful activity that is rapidly gaining more and more interest in London.”

The project is funded by Ecominds, a new scheme run by mental health charity Mind on behalf of the Big Lottery Fund.

Food waste getting you down?

By Mary Anna Wright

THE Council has teamed up with Love Food Hate Waste (LFHW) to offer some top tips for spring-cleaning fridges, freezers and store cupboards.

LFHW is a campaign that encourages people around the country to turn leftover food into delicious meals and snacks.

These include using stale biscuits and cake to make trifle or cheesecake bases; and adding paprika, Worcestershire sauce, sweet chilli sauce, and a splash of vinegar to an almost empty marmalade jar to create a tasty marinade for meat and fish. Other ideas to avoid generating food waste include remembering that food can be frozen right up to its use-by date; and that in most cases, best before means food may be past its tastiest, but is still safe to eat. The exception is eggs, which should not be eaten past their best before date.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "With many people in Hackney feeling the pinch, now is a good time to focus on food waste.

"People in Hackney could be wasting up to £50 a month by throwing away food that could be eaten."

A free LFHW cookery book, featuring winning recipes from residents and restaurants across North London, gives leftovers a new lease of life when transformed into a series of dishes. Download it at the link below, or call the recycling team to request a copy.

Help tackle the problem of floating pennywort

By Rachel Salmon

VOLUNTEERS are being sought to help clean up the River Lea, which runs through Hackney.

This spring, environmental charity Thames21 has teamed up with Government body, the Environment Agency, to offer training and support to volunteers. They will remove floating pennywort – a plant that starves water of light, nutrients and oxygen – as well as reporting pollution and illegal fishing.

John Bryden, Environment Agency Biodiversity Officer, explained: "The Lea is a great river with spots of real beauty and tranquillity, but some of the areas are currently a little unloved and don't live up to their full potential."

Debbie Leach, Thames21 Chief Executive, added: "The project is a great opportunity to get people involved, increase their access to the river and improve the area for the community and wildlife." Call Vicky D'Souza on: 020 7093 6383; or: 07827 852 599; or e-mail: lovethalea@thames21.org.uk

Exchanging trade

Young people from Skinners' Academy during an exchange visit to Turkey

By
Marcel Reinard

SKINNERS' Academy has secured nearly £19,000 worth of funding to set up a trade and culture project with a Turkish college.

Working with Lutfi Ege Anadolu Ogretmen College in Denizli, Turkey, students will explore art history, textiles and the onyx stone industry in both countries, as well as the import and export of Fairtrade goods.

The two-year British Council programme will provide a practical context to teach design and technology, art, business studies, modern languages and ICT skills. In addition, the project is aimed at enhancing pupils' historical, cultural and business knowledge.

As part of the partnership, 20 sixth-formers travelled to Turkey last month, visiting the partner school. Students also gave presentations about their academy, Hackney and the English education system to the Ministry of Education in Denizli.

“ It was good to see how strong the community was and how they support one another ”

The trip coincided with Fairtrade Fortnight from 28 February to 13 March, which campaigns for better prices, working conditions, sustainability, and trading terms for international farmers and workers.

Ozlem Oz, a Skinners' Year 12 student, said: “We learnt so much about the history of the town and the textiles industry. It was good to see how strong the community was and how they support one another in terms of Fairtrade and textiles.”

Out of Africa

TRANSPORTED to Africa, via Hackney, schools from across South East England enjoyed a concert performed by Hackney pupils alongside the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

Queensbridge Primary School pupils led nearly 2,000 young people in song for charity The Classical Road Show's production of 'Zambezi Tales' at Cadogan Hall, in Chelsea. The 30 schoolchildren performed solo sections and encouraged the audience to join in with parts of the performance.

The concert – a collection of African tribal folk tales set to music – featured the prestigious orchestra, and narrators including Hackney Empire's favourite panto dame Clive Rowe, as well as a selection of African dances and drumming styles.

Queensbridge pupils on stage

The 3 March event aimed to give children the opportunity to perform with professional orchestras and hoped to make classical music more accessible to young people.

Sarah Bailey, Queensbridge headteacher, said: “We are really proud; they were sensational.”

News in brief

Leafy future

A HACKNEY school and college are among the first to be given a green makeover as part of a London 2012 host borough initiative.

BSix sixth form college and Skinners' Academy students planted 66 and 14 trees in their respective grounds for the 'Trees for the Hosts' programme. Delivered by London Wildlife Trust, the project intends to transform the environment around the Olympic Park, and in schools and colleges across the host boroughs. So far, a total of 409 native trees have been planted, including ash, field maple, hawthorn, hazel, silver birch, wild cherry and dogwood. WORLD-BEATING kayaker Tim Brabants led a lesson at Haggerston School to boost pupils' anticipation of and enthusiasm for London 2012.

The Beijing Olympic gold medallist joined other leading figures from the worlds of business, media, sport and politics, to swap the corridors of power for those of schools across the country as part of National Teach First Week (7-11 March). Run by charity Teach First, the scheme gives guest teachers the chance to share their passion and expertise in their chosen subject.

Tim said: “To achieve your absolute best, you need support from those around you – family, teachers, coaches. I've been lucky to have received some of the best there is. This opportunity enables me to pass on some of that support and help future generations start on their road to success.” Clapton Girls Technology College was also visited by Aiyesha Andrade, a senior account analyst at Shell, who taught a Year 13 business class as part of the week.

Syd Barrett: Art & Letters

Until 10 Apr, Idea Generation Gallery, Redchurch St, E2 7JB

A collection of unseen photographs, personal love letters and original artworks document the life of the late Pink Floyd guitarist Syd Barrett.

The exhibition purports to show a lesser-known side of the prog rock band's founding member, away from media reports of heavy drug use and struggles with mental health.

▶ For more info, visit: www.ideageneration.co.uk

A talented artist, Syd returned to painting after leaving the band in the late 1960s and the exhibition showcases his work as well as presents candid images of both home life and early Pink Floyd photos – some of which were thought to have been lost forever.

Displaying the chaotic mind of a true creative genius, artworks on display span from 1962 to his death in 2006.

Hamlet the Clown Prince

Hackney Empire, 23-26 March

Shakespeare's weighty masterpiece is stripped down to 90 minutes of slapstick and silliness for this performance. Hamlet the Clown Prince removes the original text's bleakness, unashamedly enacting comedic devices rather than seriously attempting the 400-year-old revenge tragedy. Performed by The Company Theatre of Mumbai, it opened in India in 2008 and won 5 Awards at the 2009 Mahindra Excellence in Theatre Awards including best play and best director.

The production said in trying to understand the text, the six clowns wilfully misinterpret, muddle scene orders, and confuse their own lives with those of the characters. Maybe they are looking for the essence of Hamlet and in so trying to find meaning for modern society. Existentialism aside, perhaps leave any coulrophobes (ie people who are scared of clowns) at home though.

The Boy On The Swing

Arcola Theatre, 24 Ashwin Street, London, E8, until 9 April

ASKING some of the bigger questions, new play The Boy On The Swing by Joe Harbot pledges to explore religion's place in the 21st century with razor-sharp wit. Protagonist Earl is an ordinary guy: he's got a job, friends and is not alone – he is, however, spiritually lost. When a bizarre business card 'turns up' in his life, a new contact is seemingly able to offer all the answers.

As Earl finds himself in another reality, he finds even more difficult questions arrive unabated, both from himself and his new acquaintances. 'The Boy On The Swing' was first seen in 2008 at Newcastle Live's Building Works Festival and its London premiere will be at the newly relocated Arcola's Studio 2.

Joe Murphy, who recently presided over the Fringe First winning Bunny, takes directing duties.

After the show on 21 March, a short dramatic response piece written by Jessica Hynes of TV show Spaced will be performed.

A page for young people in Hackney

Snappy stuff

'As I wait on you' (above), and 'Three strikes and you're out' (top) by Hackney Young Photographer, Tola Agoro

Photos by Tola Agoro, 18

THE Hackney Young Photographers (HYP) training sessions wound up with a careers and portfolio session on 10 March.

Coming up next is an exhibition of their work – shots they have taken of other young creative people. And later this year the group also has big plans for getting a leg up in the world of fashion photography. Watch this space for more details.

In this edition of Hackney Today, YH World shows off some photography from HYP's Tola Agoro, 18, who says: "The girl by the window shot was taken in my best friend's little brother's room. The flash gave the picture such a washed out look we decided to try some natural lighting. She held the curtain and I just told her to imagine there was someone out there she was waiting for. The other one was in a classroom. It was a session on composition and we were shooting in monochrome with reflectors as the only light source."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Celebs in the road safety spotlight

TEEN road safety was back in the spotlight this month, as Transport for London (TfL) launched the latest phase of its campaign to keep young people safe from harm. 'Don't Let Your Friendship Die On The Road' will run for four weeks. Posters are being put up across the city, alongside online video support from TfL Road Safety Ambassadors (RSAs), reminding teenagers of the key message to 'look out for their mates' while they are out and about.

Following the success of last year's support from Tinie Tempah and Eliza Doolittle, new ambassadors include BBC TV's 'Being Human' stars, Lenora Crichlow and Russell Tovey, who join musicians Wretch 32, Yasmin and Dels to offer their help free of charge.

Overall the number of teenagers killed or seriously injured on the roads has fallen by almost 55 per cent since the campaign started in 2000.

has been compiled with help from staff and volunteers at YH World – a social enterprise that produces a website full of info about events, courses, and general happenings in Hackney.

They aim to make sure young people don't miss out – and most of the stuff they include is free to take part in. They are always looking for young journalists and undercover reporters. To get involved call: 07968 532 923; or visit: www.yhworld.co.uk

Operation: get me a job

IN order for me to understand how to get the job I want, I decided the next logical step would be to speak to an individual who is in a similar role to the one I hope to eventually gain, and get some much needed advice.

Luckily for me, former Transport for London (TfL) intern, turned self-employed camera wiz kid,

Tom Wutton, 23, sat down with me to break down the journey to finding his 'amazing job', as a freelance filmmaker for the company. Before showing me clips he has produced for TfL's 'Don't Let Your Friendship Die On The Road' campaign. Tom advised internships are the best way to get into the media industry. He started that way himself, before landing his paid freelance job to film the road safety videos – which feature a bevy of popular music artists.

Tom, a recent TV production graduate, explained: "I started working freelance for TfL, made a bit of cash and got my own cameras. I normally target corporate companies that need to get their message out in different ways."

He continued: "I applied to do a placement at TfL, and did video editing and filming, and then I thought nothing of it. Then in September they needed people to film, I reapplied and they really liked the stuff that I did."

So is an internship the next step for me too?

Hackney girl Akilah Russell, 22, has a good CV, a degree nearly complete, and she's had her name in print. YH World is following her race to find a job in TV – she has set herself a deadline of 30 May

News in brief

£25k for hospice heart patients

SUPPORT for patients with heart failure has received a £25,000 grant boost. St Joseph's Hospice, in Mare Street, said the cash will help its work with chronic heart disease patients, as well as forging new links with key community groups and professionals.

It is hoped this will improve the awareness of what St Joseph's can offer patients and broaden access to the hospice's end-of-life care services.

Thanks to the grant, heart failure patients can now join a heart failure wellbeing clinic at St Joseph's, where they can meet other people in a similar situation; take part in supportive discussions with professionals; and learn new skills to help improve their quality of life.

Heart failure is a long-term condition that affects the heart's ability to pump sufficient blood and oxygen round the body, often leaving the person feeling breathless and lethargic. People may also suffer from swollen legs due to fluid retention.

The grant was made by charity, the Burdett Trust, and is managed by Help the Hospices.

For more info about the clinic, call: 020 8525 6060; for info on St Joseph's hospice visit: www.stjh.org.uk

The concert takes place on 23 March, 6-8.30pm, at City & Hackney Carers Centre, 96-102 Springfield House, E8 2LZ. Tickets are £10, or £5 for carers and those they look after. For more info, call: 020 8525 2316; or e-mail: cyrillaia.francis@cityandhackneymind.org.uk

Your say on health

By
Marcel Reinard

RESIDENTS who use social care or wellbeing services still have time to give their views on the support they receive.

The consultation, which runs until 31 March, is part of a review through the Council's Transformation of Adult Social Care programme. It offers local people a chance to shape the kinds of services that will be commissioned in the Service providers sharing ideas at an adult social care conference last year. The Council and its partners want to hear views from both service users and carers future. The review will cover services provided by the Council and local health organisations, including those that offer advocacy, counselling and advice on healthy living.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Adult social care is changing to give people more choice and control over the support they receive.

"This consultation allows local people to tell us what services they like and will help make sure there is a range of excellent support that local people can benefit from."

When you're a stranger

Clockwise from above: interior of the Ayahs' Home from a book published in 1906; extract from OS map, 1916-19, showing the Ayahs' Home; junction of King Edward's Road & Fremont Street, c1903; ayahs outside the home, c1910; junction of King Edward's Road & Shore Road, c1900

By Sally England,
Local Studies Librarian

FOR centuries, Hackney has welcomed new residents from all over the world.

Until the middle of the 20th century, arrivals were mostly from Europe, although the first recorded black person to live in the borough was in 1630.

Most newcomers put down roots and stayed for good, but for many years Indian women often lodged in Hackney for only brief periods of time before returning to their homeland: native nannies (ayahs) and domestic servants brought to Britain and then discharged by their employers, found shelter and safety at the 'Ayahs' Home' in King Edward's Road, E9.

The original home was opened by Mr and Mrs Rogers at 6 Jewry Street in Aldgate, but by 1900, they found themselves overwhelmed by the running costs.

The couple approached the London City Mission and asked if it would be prepared to take on the home, with the Rogers continuing to act as managers.

The Mission agreed to the proposal, and moved the home from Aldgate to a larger house at 26 King Edward's Road, on the corner of Fremont Street.

'A Strangers' Home for Asiatics, Africans and South Sea Islanders' also opened in Limehouse in 1857, offering temporary accommodation to Lascars – sailors from the Indian subcontinent. Their short-term contracts serving on British ships often left them stranded in port, destitute until another ship sailed to India.

Ayahs and servants suffered a similar situation when, after caring for their employers' families during the long sea voyage to Britain, they were released from service on arrival.

The Ayahs' Home had about 30 rooms decorated in Eastern style, and cared for up to 100 visitors each year. Despite the refuge's name, the women who stayed there didn't just come from India, but from across the Asian continent including Malaysia, Burma, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, and Japan. As well as caring for the women, the home operated as an employment agency, where families travelling East could hire nannies or servants. Some women made the long voyage many times: Mrs Anthony Pereira made 54 journeys between Britain and India during her working life.

In 1921, the home moved from 26 to 4 King Edward's Road and was renamed as the 'Ayahs' and Amahs' Home', reflecting the number of Chinese nannies also staying there. The home existed until the early 1940s, its closure brought about by changes in society as well as the outbreak of the Second World War.

Is local history your thing?

THE Friends of Hackney Archives were established in 1985 to support the work of the Council department. They have raised funds to buy material for the collection including books, manuscripts, prints, photographs, and two important collections of theatre posters. They have published local history research in the form of booklets, DVDs and the journal 'Hackney History'. The Friends also keep the department in touch with users by funding a regular newsletter, 'The Hackney Terrier'.

You can help the Archives by joining the Friends. The annual subscription is £10. Better still, you can get directly involved. The Friends are a registered charity run by members, and in their 25th anniversary year they would welcome new faces. If you would like to take part, the Friends would love to hear from you. The Mayor and Councillors Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Waterhouse Chef, Bob Griffiths, presents a delicious sticky toffee pudding that is a real treat. Despite what you might imagine about sticky toffee pudding, this recipe makes quite a light, textured dessert that soaks up all the toffee sauce really well. You could use any dried fruit instead of dates, for example, raisins, sultanas or apricots are fine. Enjoy this classic dish as a perfect warmer to take you into springtime.

Sticky toffee pudding

Serves 10

Preparation time 20
20 mins

Cooking time 30
30 mins

Ingredients

For the pudding

- 120g soft butter
- 180g brown sugar
- 4 eggs
- 230g plain flour
- 1 tsp baking powder
- 1 tsp teaspoon bicarbonate of soda
- 240g dates
- 300ml boiling water

For the toffee sauce

- 300g sugar
- 500ml double cream

Method

- Put dates in boiling water to make them soft
- Beat sugar and butter together until it looks light brown and a bit fluffy. Add two eggs, mix up, then add two more

- Next, add the flour, bicarbonate of soda and baking powder and mix together
- Drain the dates, add to the mix and add to the boiling water
- Pour it into a baking tin lined with paper
- Cook at 170°C/350°F for 30 minutes until it is a light brown colour, risen and spongy in the middle when you poke it
- For the sauce, put your sugar in a pan with a splash of water. Boil until dark brown then add double cream bit by bit. It will bubble up madly, so watch that it doesn't boil over. Let it simmer for 5 mins
- Cut pudding into chunky bits, pour sauce over and serve

Car club scheme survey results

FOLLOWING feedback from residents, plans to introduce an extra 23 car club bays at new locations in the borough have been approved. The decision took into consideration the outcome of a consultation, which found 67 per cent of respondents were in favour of car club schemes as a whole. Of those who objected to the proposals, the majority were worried about difficulties finding a parking space. However, car clubs have been shown to reduce pressures on parking spaces in the medium to long term. A 2009/10 Carplus Annual Members Report indicated that 25 per cent of members sold their car as a direct result of joining a car club, and therefore each car club vehicle was calculated to remove at least 11 private vehicles from the road. In response to concerns about the impact of the extra car club bays on resident parking, each bay was reduced to five metres, instead of the 10 metre double bays originally proposed. And in Lynmouth Road – where the majority of residents who responded to the survey objected to the creation of a new bay – the Council will now be consulting on an alternative location. 2011 Census

Car club Streetcar has worked with the Council since 2007

The 2011 Census –
the most important ever for our borough

Message from Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney

This guide tells you all about the 2011 Census and explains why completing your form will mean more money for vital services across the borough.

It also tells you where you can get support if you need any help with your census questionnaire. The census, run by the Office for National Statistics, takes place every 10 years and is the official count of the population in the UK. These population figures are used to calculate the amount of funding that each area will receive for a range of local services including health, education, housing and the emergency services. It is also used to help determine the amount of money your Council receives to provide services, including adult social care, youth services and waste management and in these difficult times, this is more important than ever. Last time, in 2001, only 72% of people in Hackney returned their form and this low return meant the borough lost out on around £57 million of funding from central government to deliver key services including health and social care in the last year alone.

The Census benefits everyone in Hackney, no matter what their nationality or age and I urge everybody in the borough to play their part, and help get the count right in 2011. By filling in your form, and explaining to others why it is important to do so, you can make a real difference to services in our borough - now and for the future.

Jules Pipe

Ten things you might not know about the census

The census happens every 10 years. It is run by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) and is the only time everybody in the UK is counted.

The information from the census is used by the government to make decisions about how much money to put into essential services, like hospitals, schools and housing.

Information taken in the census is totally confidential, it is kept securely by the ONS and won't be shared with any other organisation.

In 2001, more than a quarter of households in Hackney did not return their forms, which means the borough has lost out on vital funding over the last decade.

Nearly 200 countries around the world, from Argentina to Zimbabwe, have a census. The first full UK census was in 1801.

Everybody within a household should be included in the form no matter what their nationality and even if they are only in the house temporarily, or staying overnight on 27 March.

If there are more than six people in your household (of any age) you will need to either fill your form in online, or request a continuation sheet from the ONS (please see contact details on the back cover).

If you have lost your form, you can request a new form online or telephone the national census helpline.

If you already know who will be in your household on 27 March, you can fill in and return your form right away – one less thing to worry about!

The low count in 2001 meant that last year alone the borough lost out on around £57 million of funding from central government.

Abayomi Adesanya

Abayomi Adesanya, 2011 Census Area Manager, Hackney South

Who are you, and what are you doing to make sure the census benefits Hackney?

My name is Abayomi and I am one of the Census Area Managers for Hackney. I am employed by the Office for National Statistics to oversee all of the census activities in my area. My goal is to make sure everyone understands why the census is vital for Hackney and that every household completes and returns their form.

Tell us more about your job

My job is great, I get to speak to people from all over Hackney and explain why the census is so important. All the different communities in the borough help to make this a really special place to live and I am really pleased that my job will help to make a positive contribution to its future.

Why is it so important for people to fill in and return their Census form?

We need to make the 2011 Census count for Hackney. When you fill in your form, you'll know that you're helping to get the best for the area you live in. Funding for education, housing, the emergency services and health services is all based on census information so even if just a few households don't return their form, it could make a real difference to the amount of money the area receives.

What else is happening to make sure Hackney has a high return rate?

There is plenty of help available for people who need a bit of extra support, including help for people whose first language isn't English. You can visit the census website or call the national helpline. Census collectors will also be visiting households who still haven't returned their form in April to offer help, so everyone should get support if they need it.

What can people do to help?

Please spread the word! If you have filled your form in, tell your friends and family members to do the same. If we all work together, we can make the 2011 census a real success for Hackney.

If you haven't received a form or need a replacement, visit www.census.gov.uk or call 03000 201 101

The census and your health services

Dr May Cahill, GP at London Fields Practice, talks to Hackney Today about the importance of the census to Hackney's health services.

Dr May Cahill

As a practicing GP in the borough, I know how important health services are to Hackney residents. That's why I and my Practice Team will be urging all our patients to fill-in and return their census questionnaire.

It's not just doctors that rely on census information for funding – the money received for NHS dentists, opticians, pharmacists and all of our hospital services is directly linked to census data. We also use the information to plan new services and to work out what specialist services we might need to commission, to meet the specific needs of our residents.

In 2001, Hackney's response to the census was one of the lowest in the country. This meant we lost out on millions of pounds of funding over the last decade for all sorts of services, including health care – let's make sure that doesn't happen again. I want the health services in Hackney to be the best they possibly can and to continue to be accessible to everyone, no matter what their level of need. Please help us to get the best possible deal by returning your census questionnaire. Being 'counted' matters.

Need help?

Do you need help filling in your form or have a question? Or maybe you need to request a continuation form or a whole new replacement form. Whatever the case, there is plenty of support available:

Online

Visit www.census.gov.uk to request a replacement form or continuation form. You can also use the online help centre to request the questions in one of 58 different languages, ask for a large print form, audio guide, British Sign Language DVD and to look up a whole host of frequently asked questions.

Telephone

You can also call the census helpline on 03000 201 101. If an operator is unable to provide the level of help you need, they can also arrange for a member of census staff to visit your home.

Completion events in Hackney

Community groups in the borough will be running completion events where you'll be able to get advice and support. For details visit www.hackney.gov.uk/census or call or email Karen West-Paul on 020 8356 4454, karen.west-paul@hackney.gov.uk

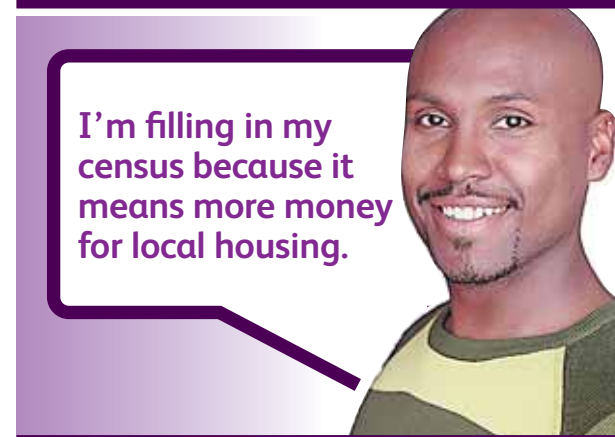

I'm filling in my census online.

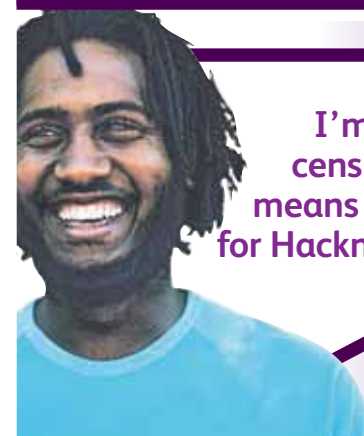

I'm filling in my census because it means more money for Hackney's health services.

I'm filling in my census because it means more money for work and training services.

I'm filling in my census because it means more money for local housing.

I'm filling in my census because it means more money for Hackney's schools.

Keeping your information confidential

Information gathered from the census is kept completely confidential by law and is only used to produce and analyse facts about numbers of people. No personal information that could identify an individual or household can be shared with any other government departments or marketing companies. The data is even exempt from the Freedom of Information Act. So you can be confident that no matter what your circumstances, your information is secure.
